Taunt. Dodge. Let Granny smash it

Grandma winds up an axe; its glowing arc runs past Komur to the plant chandelier's rope in the conservatory.

1. TAUNT

   Meow at Grandma until she reaches for the heavy cutlery.

2. AIM

   Stand in front of a glowing weak spot: her throw is aimed through you.

3. DODGE

   Gallop clear at the last moment. A hit leaves you seeing stars, and she grabs.

4. SHE SMASHES IT

   Ropes, stoves, floors, the glass roof, and finally the roof brace.

"GRANNY DID IT" doubles the points.

Komur in headless Blender

Recoloured base model, 38 procedural clips: catwalk, gallop, aimed leaps, climbs, grooming. A runtime layer bends spine, tail and head.

Grandma’s brain

Sight and hearing, A* across two floors and the garden, telegraphed throws steered by the cat’s bait.

Physics destruction

Rapier rigid bodies; props fracture into persistent debris, then five authored set pieces take over.

Runs in a browser tab

three.js WebGL2 with no shader hitches; music that follows the chase; touch controls on phones.

The Last Supper (top); Komur on the dining table.

The angrier she gets, the more the house loses

The superstition is the premise

Grandma blames the black cat for her bad luck, then demolishes her own house trying to catch him.

The cat is the mechanic

Leaps, swipes, taunts and dodges. Komur has no weapons, only mischief and timing.

The cat is the narrator

A dry inner monologue against an increasingly unhinged Grandma: “I barely lifted a paw.”
